Accomplishment Statement

When it comes to accomplishments, numbers talk. Validate your accomplishments with dollars, percentages, and other values to show measurable results. Accomplishment statements reveal what someone completed or achieved as opposed to simply what they were responsible for. Consider this: The one thing that separates a so-so resume from a great one is the effective use of accomplishment statements.

Step #1	Describe a simple work duty, such as: “Trained new employees”
Step #2	Enhance your statement by adding the results of the action taken: “Trained new employees resulting in increased customer satisfaction”
Step #3	Quantify the results of the activity or the work effort: “Trained 15 new employees over a 12 month period resulting in increased customer satisfaction by 120%”

Accomplishment statements should be brief, specific, and results oriented. Begin each statement with an action verb. Use quantitative or qualitative measures wherever possible.

In general, consider an activity to be an accomplishment if any of the following occurred:

- Your performance exceeded past performances
- Equal results were achieved with fewer resources
- Things were made easier, simpler, or were done more quickly
- Something new was achieved

Work statements that can be turned into accomplishment statements by quantifying the results of the activities:

- Reduced costs, processing errors (resulting in increased quality, sales, etc.)
- Implemented a stronger advertising campaign that dramatically improved customer base
- Created and implemented programs to teach individuals to canoe, windsurf, and sail

OCCUPATIONAL EXAMPLES

A production/assembler shows reduced costs and improved performance:

“Initiated advanced assembly procedures to increase production 10% by reducing turnaround time from 5 to 4 days.”

A welder relays his dedication to quality:

“Achieved a record of zero defects in all pipe-welding and ductwork jobs.”

An engineer shows how she contributed to the bottom line:

“Drove $1.2 million revenue increase by deploying 200-plus software suites for company’s leading product line.”

A minister demonstrates how he increased church participation:

“Helped grow membership from 175 to 249 in one year through active involvement in community events.”
